To Whom It May Concern:

Based on your job description, I believe we might be a great match for each other. Developing front-end websites and applications is my forté. I have been hand-coding website from scratch since 2004, staying on top of the latest technologies, whether it is using jade for HTML, SASS or LESS for CSS, and of course the latest Javascript frameworks, like jQuery, angularjs, backbone.js, handlebars.js, vue.js, some Reactjs, etc. I also have WordPress, D3, YAML, XML, Craft CMS, Twig, database, and DevOps experience, along with experience in ecommerce development, mobile development (Android, iPhone, iPad, and various notebooks/tablet, responsive development, and standard web development. When I am not working for a client, I spend some of my time reading articles from worldwide leaders in this field and creating projects using current/new technologies, so I can have a grasp on how things are done in today's market. Development is constantly evolving, and as my career, it is my responsibility to keep up with those changes and remain a contributor. Coding is not my life, outside of it, I am a huge NFL and Chicago Blackhawks fan. I plan events and parties with/for friends and family. I also created a CTA (Chicago Transit Authority) blog sharing stories of my commute in public transportation. I haven't updated it in a couple of years, because my commute has dwindled down to nothing. Life is good. Work is good. And hopefully, this next step in my career will be just as good!

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Dacia James". The script is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Dacia" being more prominent and the last name "James" following in a similar style.
